The people of Atlanta have a high duty which they must perform to these noble doctors, who have left families, friends, a healthy city and other blessings, to go where the dire plague is raging at its worst. We must send them every possible aid and the hospital established by them must be considered as much an Atlanta must be considered as much an Atlanta institution as if it were in our midst. Whatever is needed to keep it up Atlanta must furnish. Our people will not fail to do their duty in this matter.

Our order which, during the early part of the epidemic, escaped, has now began to suffer, and very severely, too. We did not think if necessary to make an appeal to the country as an order, for we are not, strictly speaking, a benevolent organization. It is to be deeply regretted now that we did not appeal, for we are unable, without outside assistance, to give the necessary attention to our distressed brethren.

assistance, to give the necessary attention to distressed brethren.

It is with sorrow that I am compelled to speak of the loss of our G. W. Counselor and G. W. Rep. Governor Samuel Bard, and twelve of our members. Quite a number are sick, and many are destitute, absolutely requiring relief.

Some have dled, and others, no doubt, will, whose burial expenses have to be paid by the order, and our private and lodge finances have been heavily drawn upon. The only assistance we have received was a remittance of $20 00 from Merced, 450 of Merced, California, which was thankfully received, but which was only a part of what we must have.

Merced, 469 of Merceu, which was only a part of thankfully received, but which was only a part of what we must have.

You must disabuse your mind of the impression that the epidemic is over, for it will last a month or more yet, and will, no doubt, claim more of our templar band. Even after it is over, assistance will be needed for destitute and dependent members of the order.

I do not think an appeal to the world advisable, but I can assure you that whatever can immediately be done privately and quickly, will be sorely needed, and will be judiciously and conscientiously disbursed. Truly and fraternally, wh. W. CRANE, JR., Grand Secretary of Louisiana.

called on Dr. Powell and asked him if the report that he was treating a case of yellow fever was true.

Dr. P.—Well, I have been treating a case of what might so be considered. It is a negro named Gus Griffin, who came here from Chattanooga. I was called to see him, and found that he had a severe headache, but learning that he had been drinking some beer, I supposed that might be the cause of this symptom. However, next day the case had so far developed as to assure me that he had a case of the same fever that is raging in Chattanooga, whatever that may be. I began treating him at once, and called in Dr. Simpson, who is a relative of Col. Farrow, near whose residence the case is lying. The patient is now getting on finely, and will soon be well, I hope.

Reporter—Is there any danger of a spread of this fever?
Dr. P.—None at all from this case. I have Dr. P.—None at all from this case. I have treated three cases of yellow fever before this and one of them had black vomit. I know that no case originated from any of these. We have an altitude sufficient to make it a great improbability that we shall ever have any original yellow fever, provided we do our duty and keep the city clean. Exact always kills the fever. Why? Because Frost always kills the fever. Why? Because it destroys that on which it feeds. Now, what is done by nature through means of frost, can be done by science if properly applied. Properly cared for, Atlanta need not fear the fever.

That they intend to evacuate Adrianople is not believed, popular agitations being promoted in Adrianople to prevent the Russians from leaving.

I will now call the attention of my com-petitor to a matter in which he may inter-est himself with more profit to the people than in this affair, where he has volun-teered his able services to aid one of the insurance corporations which have so wilely robbed the people of Georgia. "Instead of this officer representing the state in litigation, the records show, as I am informed, that since the establishment of such an office we have had to pay $62,000 for attorney's fees."

I understand that a large proportion of this enormous sum was paid out for attorneys called to the assistance of Col. Hammond and to save the interests of the state. How much of it was paid, over his legal salary, to Col. Hammond I have not the records at hand to say.

Judge Wright, of Rome, upon the same floor and in the same presence, said:

"I had no conception, until I heard it read out here yesterday, of the enormous expenditures which had been made by the state under color of that office. I do not want to be understood as saying that anything

Judge Wright is a people's man and knows a rat-hole when he sees it in their treasury, and appreciates the stomaching powers of the rat that goes in and out of it.

I desire further to call attention to section 1648 of the revised code of Georgia, in which appears the following sentence under the head of fees of attorney general:

"For suits for collection of money on account of the state, out of the circuit in which he resides, when litigated, ten per cent. of the amount collected, and fifty dollars if not collected; if not litigated, ten per cent. of the amount collected, and fifty dollars if not collected; if not litigated, ten per cent. of the amount collected, and fifty dollars if not collected; if not litigated, ten per cent. of the amount collected, and fifty dollars if not collected; if not litigated, ten per cent. of the amount collected, and fifty dollars if not collected; if not litigated, ten per cent. of the amount the autorney general was entitled to no fees for the collection of the money; but, by his own confession, he pocketed out of the amount the sum of $2,700 or $3,000. The process by which this money was retained in the pocket of (fol. Hammond is to be investigated. If it belongs to him of right, his possession of it can be explained to the satisfaction of an inquiring people; if it does not belong to him, in the language of Georgia.

It is a serious question with a good many people whether, as a matter of good morals, he ought not to pour it back anyhow. Why they think so is that only last week Colonel Hammond grounded arms in this canvast to make his appearance in the supreme court as attorney for t

Mr. Drummond purchased Bay Stranger for $150 last year from Mr. Shields, a butcher of our city, who had the horse working in a beef wagon. The manufacturers have destroyed its "spot" business by opening accounts with factors in the south, and about all the great seaport intended to prevent a stampede in Novembusiness in "contracts." Take that away, the and the New York cotton exchange would disbanded in a twelvemonth. This is not strange. It is strange that New York should ever have been a cotton mart, when London, which has more wealth, and is convenient to the chief manufacturing districts, never has been and never will be. The business does not in fact need middle-men in London. New York or any other city away from the cotton fields. We have written the foregoing caption with some degree of reserve, but as matters stand it seems certain that the first annual exhition of the North Georgia Stock and Fair Association will be THE fair of the state this season. It has been managed thus far with consummate skill and energy, and the secretary, Mr. B. W. Wrenn, has advertised it from one part of the country to the other. The attractions of the fair are as well known in Maine, California and Texas as they are in Georgia, and the probabilities are that the event will attract the largest crowd of strangers that ever assembled together in Georgia. We do not say this unadvisedly. Mr. Wrenn's advertising, while it has covered a wide field, has been wonderfully judicious. Mr. Hayes Should Study it Daily. Mr. Hayes Should Study it Daily.

Louisville Courier-Journal.

Since the publication of Senator Hill's admirable letter on the present administration, the republican papers have changed their opinion of him. After Senator Hill indorsed the president last year, and stated his intention of co-operating with him to compose the spirit of sectionalism through the country, he was highly commended by several prominent republican organs. These organs have now me words with which to express their detestation of the distinguished Georgian, who has more than once defended Mr. Hayes in the senate from the assaults of members of the president's own party, and on one occasion said: "I do not believe President Hayes was in any manner connected with or responsible for the frauds or irregularities. On the contrary, I consider him an honest, pure and upright man. If anybody attempts to hasugurate a revolution, the ex-rebels will put it down. "We will not allow it." Senator Hill meant this. He has, however, since the utterance of these views, had before him abundant and overwhelming testimony that he was deceived, and he candidly and voluntarily expresses his conviction that Mr. Hayes is a palpable and incarnated deception. This being the opinion of Senator Roscoe Conkling, the organis of that gentleman in New York should be eareful how they criticise Senator Hill. They call Senator Hill the "instigator of revolution," and point to his letter as fresh evidence of the organization of a "new rebellion," and there is some talk of printing it as a republican remaining document, with an appropriate republican preface. Frivate Louisville Courier-Journal of a "new rebellion," and there is some use printing it as a republican campaign document, with an appropriate republican preface. Private Secretary Rogers was interviewed on the subject of the letter, and expressed the bellef that it was a "serious piece of busines." Mr. Rogers and Mr. Hayes should make a daily study of Senstor Hill's letter. It may do them good.

Why did he, with such seeming studiousuess, avoid any promise committing himself to abide the action of the convention? Why did his partisans oppose Mumford's resolution above referred to? Why was it that no information could be wrung from any one of his adherents in the convention that either he or his friends would, under any circumstances, word at all, our word at all, our words at all, our words at the time of the adjournment at Columbus. At the meeting at Newnan Harris received four additional votes from Caroli, These increased the votes in the convention to thirty-eight; and of these, the majority had a fraction over twenty-one, and the minority a fraction over sixteen.

Verily, this statement does not disclose an overshadowing majority before which it was the duty of the minority to crouch and surrender at discretion! It is just in such cases that the law of the party, known as the two-thirds rule, operates with saluatary effect. It protects the people against the arts of designing politicians. It secures the momination of candidates upon whom at least two-thirds of the whole party can unite. We verily believe that to the existence of this rule more than to anything else is due the fact that the democratic party, as an organization, has survived all other parties in this country.

We do not feel called upon, however, to prove that the two-thirds rule is right. It is the law of the party, and until set aside by proper authority good democrats will continue to observe it. But in addition to our duty to insist upon the nomination of a

In view of these accumulated evidences we feel warranted in charging that Mr. Harris after six years' service in convention assembled, that he would in any event be a candidate, that he desired a nomination, only; because he thought it would clear anyestion, only; because he thought it would clear anyestion out of his ways that he ination, only; because he thought it would clear opposition out of his way; that he from the first intended to use the convention as a mere convenience; that to consummate his purpose, he set about organizing and securing delegations from the counties, the members of which he could control; that by himself, and by his special agents, he succeeded in securing a majority of delegates whom he controled almost as absolutely as the conjurer plays his puppets.

It may be thought that these conclusions are unjust to Mr. Harris and his delegates. To those who so think we propound the following questions: Why did not Mr. Harris submit himself unreservedly to the conventions.

We she sand feelings of those who rule at the money centers.

Lit was charged that Mr. Harris had been laboring to array class against class in his district, and that to accomplish the purpose he had appealed to the purpose he had appealed to the prejudices of the farmers. This animosity seems to have been directed against the legal profession especially, and he has lost no opportunity of pandering to unreasonable prejudices against it. The people want a congressman who can at least rise to the plane of a broader statesmanship than such conduct exhibits.

Why the ceaseless effort upon the part of the majority to manufacture evidence of their deep anxiety to harmonize the party, when it was clear almost from the first that they intended to break up the convention, unless they could secure the nomination of their favorite? Let these questions be truthfully answered in the light of the facts, and charity itself cannot relieve Mr. Harris and his friends from the charges we have made.

But it is contended that Mr. Harris was the choice of a majority of the convention, and that the minority ought therefore to have yielded; and that Mr. Harris was the choice of a majority of the party in the district, and that the minority was therefore both in the order in which they are stated. This very significant circumstance served to excite strong suspi-tions that he did not intend to submit his name to the convention in good faith; that he would only suffer himself to be nomi-nated to prevent opposition to his candidacy in his own party, and that if he should fail to be chosen, that he would denounce the

As an independent candidates. This suspicion was converted into certainty in our minds by the conduct of his friends after the convention met.

One of the first moves made after permanent organization of the body was effected, was a resolution offered by Mr. Mumford, of Talbot county, declaring in substance that the candidates balloted for should be bound fo support the nominee of the convention. This resolution was opposed by Mr. Harris partisans, who, being in the majority, finally forced its friends to abandon it in order to get rid of an obnoxious amendment.

To the Voters of the Fourth Congressional District of Georgia.

The democratic convention lately in session, first at Columbus, and then at Newsion, first at Columbus, and the Alberta Columbus, and the C sion, first at Columbus, and then at Newnan adjourned finally without nominating a candidate for congress. The daily proceedings of the body were fully reported in the lealing newspapers of the district, and it would seem that very little necessity exists of further statements in reference to the causes which led to that unfortunate result, the tentlemen who composed the majority with the convention have seen fit, however, to issue an address to the people of the district, in which a labored effort is made to shift affirmsnonsibility for the failure to nominate of the convention have seen it, nowever, in which a labored effort is made to shift aff responsibility for the failure to nominate from themselves to the shoulders of the minority. This unfair attempt makes it the duty of the minority to present a statement mpor their part, to the end that the democracy of the district may be able to place the responsibility where it ought to rest.

In the very outset we would direct attement tention to the fact that the Hon. Henry R. Harris at no time, so far as we have been able to learn, ever so much as intimated even that he would abide the action of the convention, if unfavorable to himself. Before the body met it was reported through the newspapers that, upon being questioned on the subject, he had said substantially that he would accept the action of the convention, provided it was fair. It was understood by this that he would constitute himself the judge and would decide the question of fairness for himself. This very significant circumstance served to excite strong suspisions that he did not intend to submit his name to the convention in good faith; that he would only suffer himself to be nominated to prevent opposition to his candidacy in his own party, and that if he should fail to remanding the minority, and that if he should fail to remanding the which a labore to the minority in the majority. The answer to the minority to the minority in the minority were to be governed. By complying with that rule they would not have gone to the minority. The minority is that he minority is the minority of the minority were to be governed. By complying with that rule they would have simply carried out their own will as a synthesis of the provided in the resolution that the transmit to result a substantially that he would abide the action of the convertion of the provided it was fair. It was understood to the party. Even in the county of Carroli, where the most energy than the county in the provided it was fair. It was an acceptance of the provided in the resolution introduced and

But what were our objections to the nomination of Mr. Harris? In answer to this question we shall be brief. We felt it to be PARTY IN THE DISTRICT WOULD UNITE. We were satisfied that the selection of Mr. We were satisfied that the selection of Mr. Harris would divide the party. We were fully advised that many democrats, certainly approaching to a majority in some of the counties of the disfrict, would not vote for him if nominated. Under these circumstances it became our bounden duty to resist his nomination, and to insist upon the selection of some other, for whom the party, as a whole, would vote. Among the objections urged against Mr. Harris were ty, as a whole, would vote. Among the objections urged against Mr. Harris were the following:

1. It was alleged that his position on the currency and bond questions was not known. That he had declined to give his opinion thereon, stating as the reason that he was not the constant of the second that he was not the constant of the second that he was not the constant of the second that the second that he was not the second that prepared to do so. It was further said that he had advised to quietness and conserva-tism upon the subjects, lest offense might be taken against us at the great money cen-ters. The people did not understand how Mr. Harris, after six years' service in cons, was without any opinion upon the questions referred to. Still less could wishes and feelings of those who rule at the money centers.

2. It was charged that Mr. Harris had been laboring to array class against class in his district, and that to accomplish the purpose he had appealed to the prejudices of the farmers. This animosity seems to have been directed against the legal profession especially, and he has lost no opportunity of pundering to unreasonable prejudices against it. The people want a congressman who can at least rise to the plane of a broader statesmanship than such conduct who can at least rise to the piane of a broader statesmanship than such conduct exhibits.

3. On the night of the 9th of August last, Mr. Harris addressed the people of Columbus. During the speech some person in the audience called his attention to a rumor to the effect that he had, while with his command of Griffin, Ga, in the late war. mand at Griffin, Ga., in the late war, CUT OFF HIS COLONEL STARS FROM HIS UNI-and he was asked for an explanation. We extract verbatim, from the speech, as reported in the Times of next morning, the explanation he gave of the circumstance mentioned:

"As to pulling off my stars and hiding my sword, I did it. My company was at Griffin. They were but a handful of old men. The enemy were at Bear Creek just above. I knew we would all be captured. I took my men into a grove; I hid my sword in a log, and cut off my stars, because I knew if I were caught with them, I would be treated better than my men. To share their fate, if captured, I did this; and I consider it one of the most heroic acts of my life. Those men who witnessed it appreciate it, and the last one of them will support me to-day."

We have no criticism to make upon this, except that Bear Creek is several miles distant from Griffin; that Mr. Harris did not know that all his party would be captured, for they were not captured; that we understand that it was the practice of General Sherman, when he captured old men and boys belonging to the militia, to send the privates to their homes and to retain the officers as prisoners of war; that we feel quite sure that Mr. Harris was mistaken as to the motive which prompted bim in laying violent hands upon his own stars and hidding his sword; that, if he so much desired to share the fate of his private soldiers, he would never have donned the stars and sword at all, but

Mr. Rucker was in the city the other day and carelessly dropped some of the samples of raillery with which he has been treating Mr. Speer's was record. As is well known, Speer ran away from home when a mere youngster and joined the cavalry. He served gallantly until the close of the war. His friends here made a good deal over his devoted services to the Confederate cause, and of course Rucker went for that record. Touching the "old faded gray jacket" of Speer's, over which Smith Clayton as editor of the Athens Watchman has done some really good writing, he says: "That is nothing. There is a stone up in Atlanta where they keep nothing but old gray jack-

Explaining why Mr. Speer joined the cavalry, he says: "Why, that is plain, gentlemen. The enemy sometimes caught the infantry, but they never caught the cavalry."

He says that when Speer first entered the camps he threw up his young arms and said: "Where are the yankees? Just show them to me and I will kill them—kill them to me and I will kill them—kill them." He was so small that he had to every one." He was so small that he had to be lifted up to the breastworks. He hastly scrambled back, exclaiming: "Let me down! Quick! D—n if they haven't got guns just like we have!"

He tells the following stories on Spect.

He says: "They say that one night Speer came plunging into camp, shouting: Get up boys and fly! They're here! They're right behind me!" An old reb turned over in his tent and asked: 'Is Speer got his hat on?" 'Yes,' was the reply. 'Well then the BALMORAL SKIRTS, Again he says: "They say that once a Yankee cavalryman 'flushed' Speer near Jonesboro, and and that he started him at full run up the railroad track towards Atlanta. A freight train was right behind him, but it never drove him after the track. He beat it to Atlanta so badly, that the engineer never had to blow his alarm whistle." Of course these stories heapest?" grew out of a fire which occurred on the evening of August 22d. It may be remembered that a spicy correspondence appeared in The Constitutions soon after the occurrence of the fire, in which Messrs. Aaron Haas, W. L. Stanton and G. W. Lowe charged upon Chief W. R. Joyner and his assistants that they acted in a very tyrannical and outrageous manner at the fire and threw water on the fire long after it was extinguished, and that this caused great loss to the complainants by damaging their stocks. Mr. Stanton and Mr. Lowe have stores adjoining the whisky store of Wm. Rich, in which the fire originated. Mr. Joyner replied to the charges of the complainants by stating in three lines that it was a willful line. The coverage of the complainants by the complainant stating in three lines that it was a wilful lie. The complainants then petitioned council to investigate the case. It was set for Saturday night, but no quorum being present the case was postponed until last night, when it came up for trial before the mayor and council. The complainants might, when it came up for trial before the mayor and council. The complainants were represented by J. T. Glenn and W. H. McAfee. Chief Joyner employed no counsel, but appeared for himself.

A number of witnesses were examined on both sides of the case, and a whole volume of evidence adduced. The prosecution claimed that on the night of the fire Chief Joyner and his assistants had acted in a very bullying manner and had thrown. in a very bullying manner, and had thrown water in to the damage of their stocks after they had assured them that the fire was completely out. They claimed that they were damaged considerably, and insulted by the firemen in a very gross and intolerable manner.

Several stables of running and trotting horses are expected here this evening.

The council had better repeal the ordinance establishing fire limits for the city. The frost Sunday morning attracted more attention than a beautiful flower garden with a bevy of charming young ladies in it. A brilliant hop at the Markham house. Thursday night, will be one of the social features of the week.

Why does the city council permit wooden buildings to be put up on Broad street, just across the bridge, in the fire limits?

The cool weather of yesterday morning made many of our early risers carry their hands in their pocket.

The LaGrange and Newnan fairs will open to-day. Both promise to be very fine. The Constitution will give full accounts of them.

After having all the evidence in the case on both sides, there was a motion made that Chief Joyner be exonerated from all blame in his action at the first posterior. This motion was unanimously carried, and the meeting adjourned at a quarter to one. Chief Joyner was congratulated by many friends, and the firemen present bore him out of the city hall on their shoulders and then gave three ringing cheers for their chief.

Messrs. Fairbanks & Co., manufacturers of scales for the world in general, have circulated in America a fac simile of a certificate in the Siamese language and character, showing that their wares have been for many years in use at the Custom House at Bangkok, and have not only given constant satisfaction, but have occasioned surprise at their durability and unchanging accuracy. This does not seem so remarkable a testimonial in the East as it possibly may be at home.

If Messrs. Fairbanks & Co. had apy desire to obtain similar autograph assurances from the States of Asia where trade is carried on, they could do so without difficulty. No custom house in China, we believe, and

Since its virtues have been utilized by Dr. Tabler as a permanent cure for Piles, the Buckeyé, now so abundant in our native forests, has become of almost as much importance in the medical world as Cinchena, or Peruvian bark, of South America. Fortunately the medical properties are in the fruit, the not the back; hence the trees will not be destroyed, but will stand many years to yield an abundant supply, and we may regard Tabler's Buckeye Pile Ointment as a permanent remedy.
